

Whites-only referendum to set apartheid's future

Associated Press

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — President F.W. de Klerk stunned the world Thursday by announcing a whites-only referendum on ending apartheid, and he promised to resign if elected.

The move came a day after his ruling National Party lost its second special parliamentary election to the opposition Democratic Party, which wants to end apartheid and create a separate homeland for whites.

The vote had been seen as a test of support for political reforms and a sign of the country's move toward multiracial democracy.

De Klerk will put the issue of apartheid to a whites-only vote.

"If I lose that referendum, I will resign," clearing the way for a whites-only general election, de Klerk told reporters.

"It is a question of honor," he said at a news conference.

De Klerk did not set a specific date for the referendum, but he indicated it would take place by the end of March.

His action was seen as an attempt to outmaneuver pro-apartheid forces while he still retains white support.

Polls say he is supported by a majority of whites. But the government's power base has been crumbling rapidly because of white unease over the rapid pace of political change and ending apartheid, the policy of racial separation in a country of 5 million whites and 30 million blacks.

If de Klerk were forced to step down, his departure would throw political reform into chaos. He has been the driving force in dismantling apartheid and negotiating a non-racial constitution to give the vote and other political rights to the black majority.

Black groups would resist any attempt to reverse reforms.

The African National Congress, the main black opposition group, and its allies denounced the referendum plan.

"A whites-only referendum is not only the hallmark of racism but also has the effect of delaying movement toward peace and justice for all our people," an ANC statement said.

The militant Pan Africanist Congress called de Klerk and his party "white supremacists who believe that our society can be transformed into a democracy only if the white minority approves of it."

The government clearly was stunned by its defeat Wednesday in the election to fill a parliamentary seat for Potchefstroom, a National Party stronghold for 40 years. The party lost a similar vote to the Conservatives in November.

The Conservatives have been gaining strength among whites frightened by de Klerk's reforms, which are expected to eventually lead to a black government.

A recession, political violence and growing crime have intensified white fears.

"The Conservative Party accepts your challenge—we have faith in the good judgment of white South Africans," Casper Uys, a Conservative member of Parliament, said of de Klerk's plan.

Israeli troops, tanks break barricades in attack on Lebanon

Associated Press

TYRE, Lebanon — Israeli troops and tanks breached U.N. barricades in south Lebanon Thursday, going after Shiite Muslim guerrillas who have been rocketing Israel. Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Israeli would keep up the attacks "until we quiet them."

The Israeli incursion drew a sharp protest from U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, who called for an immediate pull-out. The Bush administration expressed "deep concern."

U.N. sources said it was the first time since 1985 that the Israelis had crossed the security zone and taken up positions. Before smashing the U.N. barricades with a bulldozer, the Israeli troops got in fistfights with the peacekeepers, a U.N. spokesman said.

Despite fears that escalating violence would derail the next round of peace negotiations, the State Department said all parties had indicated they would be on hand for talks beginning Monday in Washington.

Syria's military chief, Gen. Hekmat Shehawi, said Thursday his country would help defend Lebanon against Israeli "trespassing."

In the Israeli thrust into the villages of Yater and Kafta, two Israeli soldiers and four Shiite guerrillas were killed; 33 people were wounded, including three Israeli soldiers, four Fijian U.N. peacekeepers, five civilians and 21 Shiite guerrillas, security sources said.

The incursion involved 36 tanks and three armored personnel carriers, and Israel said its aim was to find Katyusha rocket launchers and "terrorist nests."

The action came after three days of attacks on northern Israel by Hezbollah guerrillas using Katyusha rockets and those attacks continued Thursday.

Shamir said that if the rocket-fire continued, "We will certainly attack them (Hezbollah) ... and I hope that this will continue until we quiet them."

Two liberal Israel lawmakers demanded an urgent session of Parliament's Defense and Foreign Affairs Committee to review the ground thrust into Lebanon.

Women's coalition drives for own center

JENNIFER DERMODY

Representatives from a coalition of women's groups on campus met Thursday to discuss the possibility of creating a women's resource center on campus.

The coalition, which includes representatives from Women in Management, Women in Science, the Women's Law Forum and Voice, has prepared a rough draft of a proposal for a women's resource center. The proposal says a women's resource center on campus would "address the educational, spiritual, physical and needs of women."

The center would serve as a safe, on-campus service for a variety of concerns that have historically been inadequately addressed or quite obscured by complicated bureaucratic systems," the proposal says. According to the proposal, a women's resource center would address equal opportunity employment, eating disorders, sexual harassment (teacher/student, employer/employee, co-worker), physical and emotional abuse and resources for single mothers.

Assistant English professor Gail Houston said at the meeting that there are places on campus that deal with some of these issues, but that a women's resource center could help women to these resources.

Cheryl Preston, an associate professor at the J. Reuben Clark Law School, quoted several statistics she gathered to illustrate the need for a women's resource center.

"Suicide is dead last in the percent of women enrolled in college and Utah is dead last in the percent of female who graduate," Preston said. "Twenty percent of all people with eating disorders and deep depression are women."

there are three female CEOs (Chief Executive Officers) and 497 male CEOs," Preston said. She said a women's resource center could be devoted to dealing with why these disparities exist.

Houston said a women's resource center would help deal with violence against women. She said three out of seven of her female students at BYU have been attacked, raped or otherwise abused.

Houston said 14 years ago she was attacked by a man who broke into her home. The only place she received the help she needed to deal with the trauma of this attack was at a crisis center for women.

"The Church didn't understand what was happening to me, my family didn't understand what was happening to me and my friends didn't understand what was happening to me," Houston said.

She said a women's resource center would have people trained to help women like the crisis center that helped her.

President Gordon B. Hinckley, a counselor in the First Presidency of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, will be the keynote speaker for the Joseph Smith Symposium on Saturday at 9 a.m. in the JSB Auditorium.

The Church History Department of the Religious Studies Center is sponsoring the symposium, which will honor the life and mission of Joseph Smith.

Susan Easton Black, the director of the symposium and an associate professor of religion at BYU, said the department is excited about the symposium.

In the past, the department has focused on the early saints and major historical events.

Black said, "This is the first time the department will highlight a man, his life and contributions."

Thirty-one religious scholars from the BYU community, South Carolina, California, Columbia University and the Smith Institute for Church History will speak at the all-day symposium.

"Many have spent a lifetime studying the Prophet Joseph Smith," Black said.

Featured speakers include:

- Richard L. Anderson, "Emma's Letters to Joseph," 10:30 a.m., 445 MARB;
- Dean C. Jesse, "Joseph Smith as a Diarist," 11:30 a.m., 445 MARB;

Modest hazardous-waste bill expected to pass Legislature

By DONALD A. LEAVITT
Universe Staff Writer

A hazardous-waste bill which was shaping up to be a war earlier this week in the state Legislature turned out to be nothing but a mere rumble of words.

The House approved the hotly debated bill by 57-43 that would increase out-of-state disposal fees from $20 per ton to $50 per ton for those who dispose 100 to 299 tons per year and $80 per ton for those who dispose of 300 tons or more per year.

The Senate sponsored a more modest version of the bill which would boost those fees to $35 over three years, making it significantly lower than the bill approved by the House.

After a meeting between bill sponsors, Speaker Craig Moody and Sen. Stephen Rees, a deal was made to support a modified version of the bills.

A panel overwhelmingly approved the compromise, which increases out-of-state hazardous waste fees to $35 per ton in a single jump instead of the three years proposed by the Senate.

Accusations of "deals" being made in closed rooms were rampant, especially after Drew Lewis, president of Union Pacific — owner of USPCI, one of Utah's largest hazardous waste companies — was on Capitol Hill last week.

Lewis supports the bill sponsored by Rees, and Moody is considering entering the 2nd Congressional District race after the Legislature adjourns next week.

Moody, who had just finished driving his tougher bill through the House, denied there was any deal.

"It's amazing how people can move your lips for you," Moody said. While he was glad to see the changes in the more modest Senate bill, "I am not backing off on my bill," Moody said.

Insiders say the amended bill is the one to bet on. It has the backing of Gov. Norm Bangerter, the Department of Environmental Quality and the companies being regulated.

Young musicians to be enlightened at Piano Festival

JELISSA MADSEN
Universe Staff Writer

BYU faculty and students in the Music Department will have a chance to enlighten younger musicians during the sixth annual Piano Festival in the Harris Fine Arts Center on Saturday.

The festival is open to piano students ages 8 to 18, their parents and piano teachers from all over the state. Each day will consist of a variety of classes, a playing evaluation for the students and an Honors Recital featuring the nationally acclaimed Mexican Piano Quartet.

This festival should be a fun day for the students to learn because they will receive new and exciting insights into the world of piano," said faculty member Paul Pollei.

The festival has grown in the past years, and as a result new classes and events have been added, including a "Monster Concert" at noon.

The performance includes arrangements done especially for the Clairnova, a type of synthesizer, and the effect should be similar to that of an orchestra, Pollei said.

Also new this year is a composition competition open to high school students as a method of encouraging them to be creative while experimenting with classical composition.

The classes offered cover everything from musical theory and sightreading to history and appreciation taught by either faculty members, graduate students or pedagogy students at BYU.

The visiting students and teachers will also be given a chance to ask a panel of faculty members questions during a question and answer period.

The students will also be given an opportunity to perform for and have their music evaluated by faculty members.

Talk about joining the rat race

This unusual entry in Engineering and Technology Week's all-terrain vehicle contest belongs to Newel Jensen, a mechanical engineering major from Salt Lake City. Competing against the rat in the ELWC Garden Court Thursday were homemade entries from other engineering students. The pet apparently qualified as a vehicle, but it wouldn't follow the designated course. For a related story about the all-terrain vehicle contest and to find out which entry did win, see page 6.

U.S. trade deficit improved during '91

WASHINGTON — America's trade deficit improved dramatically in 1991, falling below $100 billion for the first time in eight years as exports hit a record high and the recession held down imports, the government reported Thursday.

While the 35 percent drop in the deficit to $66.2 billion represented America's best trade performance since 1983, analysts saw plenty of problems ahead.

America's deficit with Japan actually rose during 1991, climbing by 5.7 percent to $43.44 billion, representing two-thirds of the total imbalance.

And the overall deficit worsened considerably in December, rising by 42 percent to $5.94 billion as U.S. exports fell for a second straight month and imports climbed 2.3 percent.

Analysts have forecast that the trade gap will widen considerably this year as export growth falters because of weakness in many of America's major overseas markets.

That would represent a setback for the Bush administration, which is counting on continued healthy export gains to help lift the stagnant U.S. economy.

The labor Department reported Thursday that the number of newly laid-off workers filing claims for unemployment rose to 452,000 in the first week in February, an increase of 18,000 over the previous week.

Businesses failed at record rate in 1991

NEW YORK — Business failures hit record levels in 1991, up 43.7 percent, and insurance, finance and real estate companies took the brunt of the hit, a survey released Thursday said.

Falling real estate prices, debt-burdened businesses, stingy banks and bankruptcies from failed leveraged buyouts contributed to the demise of 87,266 businesses in 1991, the Dun & Bradstreet Corp. said. That was up from 60,746 in 1990.

Unpaid debts of defunct businesses totaled $108.8 billion last year, a gain of 95.9 percent from 1990. New England had the nation's highest percentage increase in business failures. The survey reported 5,590 regional businesses failed in 1991, up 81.1 percent from the 1990 total of 3,087.

Dun & Bradstreet said the Middle Atlantic region saw failures rise 75.6 percent; South Atlantic, 52.1 percent; and the Pacific region, 62.8 percent.

Failures were up in all states except Iowa, North Dakota, Louisiana, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado and Hawaii.

Gene found that causes muscular dystrophy

BOSTON — Researchers said Thursday they have pinpointed the gene that causes the most common adult form of muscular dystrophy, the latest in a series of discoveries that should lead to early diagnosis and perhaps eventual treatment.

The discovery provides more clues about why this inherited disease gets worse as it is passed from generation to generation.

The disease, called myotonic dystrophy, affects about one in every 7,000 to 8,000 people worldwide.

Three research teams with members in the United States, Canada and Europe discovered the gene almost simultaneously. One of their reports will be published in Friday's issue of the journal Cell. The other two will appear March 6 in the journal Science.

"The new results will permit very precise methods for diagnosing the disease prenatally and before symptoms appear and identifying carriers" of the gene, said Dr. Henry Epstein of Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, a member of one of the research teams. Experts caution that the discovery does not suggest obvious ways of stopping or preventing the disease.

Panel recommends implant restrictions

BETHESDA, Md. — A panel of experts recommended unanimously Thursday that the government allow silicone gel breast implants only for experiments and for women needing breast reconstruction.

That advice, if followed by the Food and Drug Administration, means implants would no longer be performed just for cosmetic reasons.

Women wanting to have their breasts enlarged represent 80 percent of the million who now carry the implants in their bodies. The rest have implants because their breasts had been deformed or were removed because of cancer.

Nancy Dubler, a lawyer and one of nine voting members of the 24-person panel, said the restrictions "responds to science on the one hand and compassion on the other."

Initially, five of the nine voted for the proposed restriction. The other four did not vote. The committee then discovered that six votes were needed for passage. The issue was reopened and, after discussion, another vote was taken. That tally: 9-0.

Recession gives libraries more business

CHICAGO — Libraries are seeing a surge in business as they become havens for the unemployed.

"In hard economic times, library use always goes up," observed Patricia Glass Schuman, president of the Chicago-based American Library Association. "We've heard this from libraries across the country," she added in a telephone interview from her New York office. "People are using libraries to look for jobs."

Jobless patrons are emptying shelves of career-guide books and raiding newspaper bins for help-wanted ads. John Berry III, editor in chief of the New York-based Library Journal, said it is reminiscent of the Great Depression. "People who are out of work have more time on their hands," he said.

It couldn't have happened at a worse time for libraries, which are facing an economic crisis of their own. According to an ALA report released in November, a recent survey by the Association of Research Libraries found that most member libraries were working with budget cuts of 1 percent to 5 percent in 1991 and were expecting 5 percent to 10 percent cuts in 1992.

Rabies vaccinations will be offered at clinics Saturday

By MELYNDA THORPE
Universe Staff Writer

Area veterinarians will be donating their time in Springville and Spanish Fork this Saturday to provide rabies vaccinations for area pets.

Mark Buyers, Spanish Fork's animal control officer, said animal control staff members will also be present to assist veterinarians and to provide licensing services.

Cats must be vaccinated against rabies every year, Buyers said. Dogs must receive a rabies vaccination at four months of age and a booster shot when they are one year old.

After their first year, dogs must be vaccinated every two years.

Shelley Lanser of the Utah State Bureau of Epidemiology said there were 18 reported cases of rabies statewide in 1991.

Five of those cases were found in Utah County, she said.

One rabid dog was found in Salt Lake County, and a rabid cat was found in Utah County, Lanser said. The other 16 reported rabies cases involved bats, she said.

"If people would learn to avoid bats there would be almost no problem with rabies," Lanser said.

People need to vaccinate their animals as required by state law and learn to avoid handling bats, she said.

Buyers said there have been no rabies cases reported in Spanish Fork this year, although many animal bites have been reported and many animals have been tested.

Robert Hurst, Mapleton's animal control officer, said very few rabies cases are caused by dog bites. However, animals are required to receive a vaccination as a precaution, he said.

The Spanish Fork clinic will be a one-day event, Buyers said. Veterinarians will be located at Spanish Fork Fair Grounds Saturday from 1-3 p.m. to offer services.

All dogs must be on a leash and all cats in a carrier.

Buyers said the clinic is for anyone who would like to come. It is not restricted to Spanish Fork residents, he said.

The Springville clinic will also be vaccinating animals from 1-3 p.m. It will be located behind the fire station at 51 S. Main Street in Springville.

The cost for vaccination will be $6.

The cost to license an altered animal (one that has been spayed or neutered) will be $8, while an unaltered animal will cost $12 to license.

Free maps available of Provo/Orem area

By ELISA R. WHITEHEAD
Universe Staff Writer

People having difficulty finding their way around the Provo/Orem area can now pick up a new map of these cities free of charge.

Anyone who wants a map can pick one up at the Provo/Orem Chamber of Commerce, 51 S. University Ave., Suite 214.

Steve Densley, president of the Provo/Orem Chamber of Commerce, said the Chamber of Commerce is now able to offer a combined map of Provo and Orem to the community and anyone visiting the area.

Fiona McHardy, director of public relations for the Chamber of Commerce, said the Chamber provides a new map each year to citizens. This year, rather than making two maps of Provo and Orem, they combined them to make travelling in these two cities easier.

McHardy said in the past, newcomers to Provo had difficulty finding their way around with separate Orem and Provo maps. She said, "once you get to the mall, you get lost."

McHardy said the map will be helpful to people looking to move into the area, as it includes information about Provo and Orem's quality of life, rent, climate, demographics, cost of living and crime rate.

McHardy said the Chamber mails out these maps to anyone interested in living in the Provo/Orem area.

Since Provo/Orem has been deemed "America's most livable city," the Chamber of Commerce receives an average of 30 to 40 requests a day for information on the area, McHardy said.

Not only is the information in the map valuable to potential residents, McHardy said, but it will also be valuable to current residents of Provo and Orem. McHardy said there are a lot of residents who don't know much about the history of Provo and Orem or any of the other facts included in the map. "We like to let people know what this town is about."

Although the new Provo/Orem maps have only been out for a couple of weeks, McHardy said, many people have come down to the Chamber of Commerce to pick theirs up already. McHardy said people can pick up additional maps for 25 cents.

3 men, 1 juvenile arrested charged with burglaries

By R. MARK ALLRED
Universe Staff Writer

Three men and a juvenile were arrested last week and charged with multiple counts of burglary in connection with a string of burglaries and vandalism in Provo and Orem during the past month.

Orem Det. Gerald Nielsen said Orem Police Capt. Jay Barker assigned a special task force to solve the rash of burglaries.

Officers tailed the suspects for days, then arrested them without incident while they were all together in a car.

Nielsen said one of the men was in possession of a .22-caliber blank gun. A 9mm automatic pistol was found in the car at the time of arrest.

Police believe the four are responsible for 20 to 25 burglaries in comparable number in Provo and Pleasant Grove.

Police have recovered much property taken in the burglaries, including cash, electronic equipment and a set of season tickets to Jazz basketball games.

Dan Cantrell, 25, Provo, Tuley, 18, Orem and Everett, 18, of Lindon, were booked in County Jail. Bail was posted at $15,000.

The juvenile, 17, was taken to youth detention center.

Police believe the four are responsible for breaking into and vandalizing several Orem elementary schools.

A waiver hearing has been set for Feb. 26 in Orem's 4th Circuit Court.

BYU squeaks past Utes, 58-56

Trost lays in winning basket to give Cougs bragging rights

MICHELLE ERICKSON
Sports Editor

That's what college basketball is supposed to be," said BYU coach Gary Trost after the Cougars defeated the University of Utah in a closer finish, 58-56, in Provo. With nine seconds left in the game, guard Byron Wilson made one missed one free throw to tie the game 56-56. Then Cougar point guard Nathan Call drove the length of the court, faked a shot and dished off to Gary Trost, who laid the ball in the hoop with less than a second left. It was a designed play that we had about during the timeout, and we were just lucky enough for it to go for us," Reid said about the Cougar's last score. "I thought I was going to shoot it when I saw Trost. All I could see was red and white and a big huge shot, so I dished off to Gary," Call said of the final play and his sixth assist of the game. "It seems like every year and every time we have the Utes ends on the last shot," Trost said. The game was tied five times and the Cougars shot 46 percent for the game and the Utes shot 39 percent. The Utah was one of the few teams to rebound the Cougars this season. The Utes had 32 rebounds to the Cougars' 26, although BYU outsize the Utes in every position.

BYU went inside to its big men most of the night. The Cougars didn't score a single three-point shot and every basket was scored down low, except for one outside shot by Call that tied the score with 4:00 left in the game. "I thought we did a good job defending (Paul) Afeaki inside," forward Jared Miller said. Afeaki scored 30 points in the Utes' game with Colorado State but was held to eight Thursday. "BYU did well off the bench, scoring 25 points. Russell Larson came in and led the Cougars with 14 points and two rebounds. "That's been a strength of ours all year," said forward John Fish, about BYU's depth. Wilson was Utah's leading scorer with 18 points. Trost scored BYU's final three points and had 13 points for the game, while Jared Miller had seven rebounds and guard Mark Heslop had six rebounds. "BYU took an early 11-5 lead in the game and led most of the first half, going into the locker room with a one-point lead. The Utes came out to start the second half with a quick layup by Afeaki to take the lead, and then the two teams exchanged baskets. The crowd of 22,103 fans came alive when guard Nick Sanderson drove to the basket and scored a layup to give the Cougars their widest lead of the game at five points with 12:00 left. "It is nice to see the fans get excited," Reid said. "BYU has a good team," said Utah coach Rick Majerus. "They are probably the best team we have played this year."

Men's volleyball team to take on No. 5 USC

KELLY D. CANFIELD
Universe Sports Writer

The No.10-ranked BYU men's volleyball team is going into this weekend's home matches against the No.5-ranked University of Southern California on a roll. The Cougars are on a four-match winning streak, keeping them in the top 10 in the national rankings for the last three weeks, and helping them feel confident about their play. "We're going into the matches expecting to win," BYU player Patrick Sinclair said. "We've worked hard this week and we're ready for it." Sinclair, 19, a sophomore majoring in sociology from Walnut Creek, Calif., said the Cougars are feeling more incentive to win because they have never won a single game against the Trojans in the three years BYU has been a member of the Western Intercollegiate Volleyball Association. "We have the advantage of playing at home," Jeff Ruffolo, the team's spokesman and radio announcer, said. USC coach Jim McLaughlin said he enjoys playing at BYU each year because the Cougar fans really get "pumped up." But he also knows the home crowd makes it more difficult for the Trojans. "We consider BYU a tough place to play," McLaughlin said. "BYU is going to be good sooner or later, and probably sooner, with Carl McGown (BYU's coach) leading the way." McLaughlin also said USC is improving and must play consistently over time. Ethan Watts, 19, a sophomore middle blocker for BYU from Tulsa, Okla., is third in hitting in the WIVA with a .531 percentage, and he's feeling good about the upcoming matches. "USC is a very beatable team," Watts said. "And we're the one to beat them." BYU is coming off a 3-0 win against Long Beach City College last Saturday. "We tried to win," LBCC coach Ken Gregory said. "but BYU has a really good team." The Cougars play the USC Trojans Friday and Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in the Smith Field House.

Gold medal only 2 wins away for U.S. hockey team

Associated Press

MERIBEL, France — Two more wins. One more gold. No more questions. "It's so close. It's right in front of us," Clark Donatelli said. "It's in our hands." By late Sunday afternoon, it may be hanging around every U.S. Olympic hockey player's neck — a gold medal glistening like the sweat they are pouring out to win it. The surprising Americans can match their countrymen's 1980 feat by beating the Unified Team (5-1) in Friday's semifinal and taking Sunday's final against the winner of Friday's Canada-Czechoslovakia semifinal. It won't be easy, not when the Unified Team stands in their way. Doubters abound, even though the Americans (5-0-1) have the tournament's best record. Don't tell that to the Americans.

They've already played six games without a loss. What's two more? Even if the next game is against the tournament favorite with a rich heritage of seven gold medals, one silver and one bronze in the last nine Olympics. "We knew we were going to have to play them sooner or later," Donatelli, the team captain and sparkplug, said after Thursday's practice. "I guess you could say it wouldn't be the same if we didn't have to go through Russia to get the gold medal. We're looking forward to it. We're ready for them." The United States' 22-32-8 pre-Olympic exhibition record didn't inspire confidence. But Ray LeBlanc's brilliant goaltending and a hard-hitting style have carried the Americans. And Greg Brown, perhaps their best defenseman, could be back Friday. He suffered a concussion, a broken nose and a 12-stitch facial gash when Sweden's Mats Naslund checked him at 2:04 of Monday night's 3-3 tie. He missed the rest of that game and all of Tuesday's 4-1 win over France, but was at practice Thursday. "I feel better every day," he said.

Women cagers lose on road to Creighton by 29 points

By JULIE WHITAKER
Universe Sports Writer

The Cougar women's basketball team suffered its second WAC loss Thursday night. Defending WAC champion Creighton University beat BYU by 29 points, 92-63. "Creighton is a great team," said Cougar coach Jeanie Wilson before BYU played the Lady Jays on Thursday. "We were fortunate to pull out the game here (at BYU)." Cougar senior guard Kim Talbot led BYU in scoring with 21 points. Talbot was the only Cougar to score in double figures. BYU faces the University of Texas-El Paso Saturday night. The first time these two teams met it resulted in an 86-71 victory for the Cougars. Wilson said, "UTEP is playing very well right now, especially on its home court, so we just have to concentrate on playing our game." BYU is 8-2 in the WAC and 16-7 for the year. With two more wins this season the Cougars will have won as many games as they did during Wilson's first two years coaching for BYU. Before the Cougars' road trip, Wilson said, "We're thrilled to be where we are in the WAC and for the season."

BYU staff member claims he's found cure for HIV virus

By C. TED NGUYEN
Universe Staff Writer

BYU physical plant administrator said he has found a cure for AIDS. After five years of extensive research, Daryl Tichy of Orem said he has found the cure for the AIDS virus in a small glass vial that contains silver. Tichy said, "I know deep within my heart that I've discovered the solution for the HIV virus." The lab test at the UCLA Medical Center revealed the soluble, which contains ultra-fine particles of positively-charged silver, killed "not only HIV virus but every virus that's tested in the lab," he said. Tichy, who considers himself a problem solver, said his research has drawn substantial criticism and skepticism because he is not a scientist or a researcher. Testing the silver soluble in animals is the next step in proving his theory. The cost of the test would be more than $80,000 and Tichy said he doesn't know how to raise the necessary funds. Tichy said, "I've already spent my money into a hole. I don't know what to do next." Tichy said his findings stemmed from a book called "The Body Electric" by Robert O. Becker and Gary Shelden in which Becker used silver electrodes and low-voltage current to stimulate bone growth in his patients' bone fractures without any side effects.

"In the process of his work, Dr. Becker discovered that he had wiped out the bacterias across the board, even those that were resistant to antibiotics," Tichy said.

During the course of his research, he has found people have used silver to cure various illnesses and infections.

Tichy said he would also need to get permission from the Food and Drug Administration to test the solution on humans.

Tichy said there will be a lot of time-consuming red tape and bureaucracy involved with testing.

However, because of the high priority of AIDS in the U.S., "They do have a fast track for AIDS drug (testing), which could speed up the time," he said.

"I feel here is a key for a cure," Tichy said. "Based upon other people's credentials, all I did was recognize the pattern and even though I'm the target (of criticism) ... I think there should be more spokespeople out there saying we need to run tests, we ought to get this through."

He said he has submitted his finding to different foundations and scientists; however, there has been no response.

Foreigners unload steel on U.S., Cannon says

By RAYMOND L. SEWELL
Universe Staff Writer

Pushing for fair trade from foreign competitors, steelman-turned-politician Joe Cannon testified before the U.S. Senate Steel Caucus Thursday in Washington D.C.

"We should not pursue old-fashioned protectionism, but we must use our best weapon — access to the U.S. marketplace — to break down foreign trade barriers," Cannon said.

Cannon emphasized the current plight of U.S. steel manufacturers which he said produce quality steel at competitive prices only to be undersold by foreign companies dumping their excess steel on America at artificially low prices.

Cannon explained the steel industry incurs high fixed costs while its variable costs remain relatively low.

This means foreign companies in countries such as India, Brazil, Poland, Korea and Romania can make more steel than its country's economy needs, sell enough of it domestically to cover manufacturing costs and sell the rest in the United States at a price well below production costs.

Cannon said this "dumping" by foreign companies forces the price of steel down to unfair levels.

He encouraged lawmakers to reconsider what was meant by "free trade."

"Our notions of free trade should not require us to remain the world's steel dumping ground," Cannon said.

Present laws and international trade agreements do little to help America's ailing steel industry, he said.

"The world market for steel exports does not operate according to free market principles."

Because of this, foreign companies have been able to charge premium prices from their domestic markets and then dump the remaining steel on the United States, he said.

Cannon used Japan as one example of a country that has protectionist tactics which are damaging the U.S. steel industry.

Steel prices in Japan are as much as $200 a ton more expensive than in the United States, Cannon said.

He blamed this on a "cartel" of steel manufacturers allowed under Japan's antitrust laws. Comparing current trade wars to the Cold War of earlier years, Cannon said, "Unilateral disarmament was never a credible strategy in our military relations; however, this appears to be the centerpiece of the (Bush) administration's trade strategy."

Cannon, chairman of Geneva Steel in Orem, is campaigning for the Republican nomination to fill the senatorial seat being vacated by retiring Sen. Jake Garn.

Poor children not receiving benefits

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A coalition representing disabled children said Thursday the Social Security Administration isn't bothering to inform 400,000 youngsters from lower-income families that they are entitled to federal benefits.

The Supplemental Security Income program is plagued by delays, errors and bureaucratic "foot-dragging" in processing cases, said Jonathan Stein of Philadelphia's Community Legal Services.

More than 1 million children with disabilities are eligible for the program, but only 439,000 got them in December, the Children's SSI Campaign told a news conference.

Eighty-five percent of the eligible children in some states are going without the payments of up to $422 a month, said the coalition. To qualify, income for a family of four generally cannot be more than $25,000.

The foot-dragging charge is "outrageous" and "nothing could be further from the truth," said Social Security Commissioner Gwendolyn King.

"No one knows that better than Mr. Stein, with whom our general counsel has communicated regularly and frequently over the past two years," King added.

Thursday was the second anniversary of the Supreme Court's decision which said the Social Security Administration had arbitrarily and illegally denied cash benefits to disabled children.

Some of the 600,000 children not getting benefits are covered by the court case. Most are eligible for benefits because of recent rule changes unconnected to the court ruling.

The agency "has trained examiners in every state of the Union on how to apply the new regulations," said King.

And it has printed a quarter of a million posters, over half a million brochures in English and Spanish, run TV and radio public service announcements and been in touch with 200 community organizations, said agency spokeswoman Trish Butler.

The court directed the agency to contact 452,000 children turned down for benefits between 1980 and 1990. But Stein said only 204,000 have been located.

"These families urgently need to know they may now qualify because the eligibility rules have been rewritten," said Leonard Rubenstein, director of the Mental Health Law Project, a public interest group coordinating the campaign.

'The Secret Marriage' opens tonight in the Nelke Theatre

By MELISSA MADSEN
Universe Staff Writer

For a night of comic farce funnier than any television sitcoms, "The Secret Marriage," an Italian opera by Domenico Cimarosa, is the perfect solution.

The BYU Music Department's winter opera will be playing Feb. 21 through Feb. 29 in the Nelke Experimental Theatre, HFAC at 7:30 p.m. The story is about two lovers, Carolina and Paulino, who secretly get married because of their love for each other. At the same time, Carolina's father, Geronio, is attempting to marry off his oldest daughter, Eliana, to the English nobleman, Count Robinson. But Geronio's plan is foiled when the Count falls in love with Carolina. From there, emotions run high and the secret marriage is discovered.

This show is simply about coming together to other people, marrying for love, money and sex," said Tim Ritchie, 25, a senior majoring in psychology from Fairfax, Va. Ritchie is playing Paulino.

In general, the singers enjoy playing their characters, even though often they do not identify with them.

"It is easier for me to play out anger and jealousy because I am showing fire rather than love. But I especially like Carolina because she and Paulino are the only characters with morals," said John Rogness, 22, a senior in vocal performance from Los Altos, Calif.

Assistant director Paul Asplund, a graduate student in vocal performance from Layton, Utah, said his character Bertram is simplistic because he has only one spoken line. Instead, the character spends most of his time drinking and being seduced by the ladies.

"I really don't identify with most of the qualities in my character, although he really is a funny, feisty character. I do relate to his melting in the hands of the right domineering woman, though," he said.

The character of Count Robinson, created by Paul Busselberg, 22, a senior majoring in vocal performance from Greendale, Wis., is a wealthy man who is governed by the money he has.

"The Count only wants to marry the daughters of Geronio because of the wealth he can gain from it and in the end he does marry the woman with the most money," Busselberg said. "He is foolish and acts like an idiot at times. But it is fun to act the part."

The opera this semester was chosen for several different reasons, one of which include the space available in the Nelke for scenery and cast, as well as choosing one that would use all the vocal ranges, said Arden Hopkin, director of opera at BYU.

Since Hopkin began teaching at BYU, he has tried to maintain a balance between the comic and serious operas from different periods and styles that are performed throughout the year.

"We do this not only to train the singers in the different styles of opera, but also to expose the university community to opera," he said.

Audience response to opera at BYU has not been very good, and Hopkin is baffled as to why.

"Last semester we did 'Die Fledermaus', which is one of the more entertaining operas and the response was less than we expected.

"I hope the response to this opera is better and I am willing to take a loss in revenue by lowering ticket prices and using a smaller theater in order to make the opera more attainable," Hopkin said.

Because of the light, comedic tone of the opera, audiences should especially enjoy "The Secret Marriage," Hopkin said.

"This opera is designed to be accessible to all audiences. I think that anyone who sees it will come away saying it was good," he said.

But because the opera is a comedy does not mean that acting or singing in it is easy.

"Light comedy is hard to act well. A tragedy is much easier because it is easier to make people cry than laugh.

Beef jerky container wins all-terrain race

The "Beef Jerky Container" cruised through and over the rough terrain and completed the difficult course in 16.5 seconds to capture the Engineering Department's annual All-Terrain Vehicle Contest in the ELWC Garden Court Thursday.

David Carr, a 26-year-old mechanical engineering major, and Jonathan Harris, a 24-year-old civil engineering major, said they spent over 20 hours perfecting and testing their winning all-terrain vehicle.

Harris said the object of the contest was to complete the course within a time as close to 15 seconds as possible.

"We took a round beef jerky container and packed it with a motor from DI, a mechanical eraser, four AA batteries, a lot of tape and foam as well as mint dental floss," Harris said.

"The dental floss was used to help pull the vehicle over the hill and water jump," he said.

"We kept trying again and again to make the grappling hook stick on the other side of the hill. This was our only technical problem," Harris said.

"It took a lot of perseverance and a little luck to lead us to victory," Harris said.

Carr said it was a relief when the vehicle finally worked the way it was supposed to.

"It was nerve-racking because it was our final chance to make it through the course," he said.

"The teamwork paid off at the end. Working together made all the difference during the contest," Carr said.

"At the end I was just saying 'please work,'" Harris said.

"The hardest part of our last attempt was getting the grappling hook to stick and then for our vehicle to stop on the edge. If it goes over the edge you lose, even though you completed the course," Carr said.

Carr and Harris will now have the chance to compete at the national all-terrain vehicle competition at Arizona State University.

Cheer squad invited to UCA dance finals

By BRENDA LONGHURST
Universe Staff Writer

For the first time, the BYU cheer squad made the final cuts of the Universal Cheerleaders Association dance finals. The dance team received 12th place in the nation based on its recently videotaped performance.

Lisa Arbon, cheer squad advisor and a coordinator in Student Leadership Development, said this is the first time a team from BYU has been invited to the championships in the dance division.

Unfortunately, the team will probably not attend the finals in San Antonio, Texas because of funding. Arbon said UCA pays for the top five teams to attend and battle for the title, but the other teams UCA invites must pay their own way. She said the estimated cost of the trip is $7,000.

"At the beginning of the season, the team had to vote unanimously on whether or not to enter the competition," Arbon said. "At that time, the team decided not to budget for such a trip."

Arbon said the chances for the team to win if they did go to the finals in San Antonio would be very good.

"When they videotaped their entry, the costumes weren't finished which would have put the finishing University Police are telling students to lock their lockers when in the Stephen L. Richards Building and the George Albert Smith Field House locker rooms.

Dave Adams, crime prevention specialist for the University Police said, "There has been a rash of thefts in the RB and SFH locker rooms." People should secure their belongings in lockers, he said.

"People are using poor judgment when they do not lock their lockers," Adams said.

Feb. 17, a wallet was taken from an unlocked locker in the RB men's locker room. The wallet is orange with a picture of Mickey Mouse on the front. It contained about $83, a Zion's bank card, and some miscellaneous papers.

Police also responded to the following calls between Feb. 14 and Feb. 17.

Driving Violation

Feb. 14, a male was pulled over on East Campus Drive by University Police after failing to obey traffic signals. The male was 14 years old and did not have a driver's license. He was told he would have to appear in Juvenile Court.

Theft

Feb. 15, an unattended backpack was taken from the third floor Copy Center in the Harold B. Lee Library. The backpack is royal blue canvas with a leather bottom and black, padded shoulder straps. Among the contents of the pack was a purple leather wallet, a California driver's license, a student I.D. card, keys, a checkbook and ATM card, both of which have been canceled and some Spanish textbooks. Estimated value of all the belongings is $237.

Fire

Feb. 16, University Police responded to a report of a fire on Maeser Hill. The fire was in the high branches of a tree. The branches had been resting on a power line because of heavy snow. The fire only lasted a short time. Roy Peterman, grounds director, asked police to watch the area in case further problems occurred.

Members of American Piano Quartet to perform both classical, light pieces

By MELISSA MADSEN
Universe Staff Writer

Only half of the American Piano Quartet, BYU music faculty member Jeffrey Shumway and Boise State music professor Del Parkinson, will have all the excitement of the famous quartet in their two-piano recital tonight at 7:30 in the Madsen Recital Hall, HFAC.

The program will begin with the Sonata in F minor by Johannes Brahms. According to the program notes, this piece appeared originally as a string quintet, a quartet with an extra cello. It evolved into a sonata for two pianos after Brahms destroyed the original copy because it did not live up to his performance standards.

Shumway said this piece is especially beautiful because of the soaring melodies and gorgeous harmonies that Brahms incorporates into a four-movement work.

"This piece, although 30 minutes long, stands well on its own. For that reason, we chose to make the piece the entire first half" of the performance, he said.

The second half consists of lighter pieces including Aaron Copland's "Billy the Kid," "Elegy in Alternating Chords" by Francis Poulenc and the exhilarating "Variations on a Theme by Paganini" by Witold Lutoslawski.

Copland's arrangement of "Billy the Kid" comes from his "cowboy ballet" about William Bonney which premiered in 1938. Copland compiled this suite by selecting nearly two-thirds of the complete ballet score.

In this piece the composer quotes, in his own highly original way, several authentic and well-known cowboy songs.

The "Elegy in Alternating Chords" dates from 1959 and is a witty and delightful lampooning of French music hall ditties and the cancan, according to the program notes.

For an exciting final note, Shumway and Parkinson's final piece, "Variations on a Theme from Paganini" takes a familiar melody and elaborates on it in a virtuosic way.

The playing time for the 12 variations in the piece is less than six minutes.

Because of its fast pace, the piece is very difficult, yet fun to play, Shumway said.

The best part about performing these recitals are the rehearsals, Shumway said.

"There is something about working with another musician that is very satisfying," he said.

The two professors have been friends since college years at Juilliard, and have been performing these recitals for the past seven or eight years.

"These recitals are fairly easy for us to do because musically we think the same way. We always planning the next one," Shumway said.

This performance should be a memorable one with audience appeal and musical "whistleblowing," he said.

"We wanted to pick a program that audience can relate to, so we chose both beautiful music as well as light, fun almost circus-like pieces," Shumway said.

The performance won't be boring, he said, because the audience should really enjoy themselves because of the nature of the music.

Money managers go unregulated

Most firms never inspected for fraud
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The $5 trillion financial planning industry is so under-regulated that most of the 17,000 firms offering investment advice will never be inspected for possible fraud, the Securities and Exchange Commission chairman said Thursday.

Richard Breeden said his inspection staff is spread thin and only advisers managing at least $1 billion in assets are targeted for an SEC inspection about every three years.

That means smaller professional money managers or counselors are checked only about once every 30 years "which in most cases means never at all," Breeden told the securities subcommittee of the Senate Banking Committee.

He said the number of professional money managers and counselors has exploded since 1981, from 4,580 to 17,500. In the same period the number of SEC staffers assigned to checking up on investment advisers also grew — from 36 to 46.

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., the subcommittee chairman, called the tiny number of inspectors "staggering," adding: "It's just unacceptable that we have 46 people looking over the shoulder of 17,000."

Firms or individuals must register with the SEC if they give financial advice for pay. After paying a one-time $150 registration and undergoing a preliminary inspection, they can go years without having to account to federal regulators.

Breeden said the recent indictment of a Newport Beach, Calif. investment adviser who managed $1.2 billion in funds for dozens of communities in California, Colorado and Iowa underscores the need for a tough cop on the beat. Breeden said the clients of money manager Steven D. Wymer may have suffered losses exceeding $100 million.

The SEC chief wants authority to fund more frequent inspections through higher fees or else he thinks the program should be scrapped so consumers won't think "there is oversight where it does not exist."

Higher fees ranging from about $300 to $7,000 a year would be based on a sliding scale determined by the size of the assets an adviser had under management.

Such a move would have to be approved by Congress because it would mean altering the Investment Advisers Act of 1940.

Three investors victimized by crooked financial advisers urged the passage of legislation increasing the fees on the industry.

"These people are skilled at conning their clients, and will continue to prey upon innocent victims unless they are properly policed," testified Elizabeth Fattella, Conn., a public school secretary who lost more than $30,000 investing in rare coins on an adviser's recommendation.

The "personalized portfolio" supposedly created for her and her husband also was offered to other investors, she said. And key officials of the firm she dealt with allegedly defrauded 1,000 customers in New York state.

Another witness, Tom Rush, a part-time college teacher from Columbia, Md., said he lost $10,000 to a financial adviser whose services he won in a school charity raffle. The adviser later declared bankruptcy, he said.
